SUBJECT: JAPAN: DIET EXTENDS TEMPORARY TARIFFS

REF: A. TOKYO 822

1B. TOKYO 860

11. (U) The Diet passed a law March 31 to extend "temporary" tariff rates -- including tariffs on beef, pork, and corn products -- for one year. The legislation passed after both the Upper House Finance Committee and the full Upper House plenary voted in favor of a bill that the Lower House approved March 25 (ref A).

12. (U) The Upper House had to approve the bill before Japan's fiscal year-end of March 31 to ensure no disruption in current tariff arrangements: 417 tariffs were set to sunset with the end of the fiscal year absent Diet action to renew them. The measures included provisions to maintain beef tariffs at 38.5 percent (vice 50 percent), as per agreements Japan had reached in the WTO and GATT.

13. (SBU) Media and Diet contacts report the legislation passed easily and with the support of the main opposition Democratic Party of Japan, which has focused its attention on the fight over road-related taxes (ref B).
